The Battle at Kelly's Ford

The Battle at Kelly's Ford on the Rappahannock River on 17 March 1863 was a major cavalry engagement, which resulted in the deaths of two distinguished Confederates: Majors John Puller of Alabama and John Puller of Gloucester County, Virginia (grandfather of Lieutenant General Lewis B. "Chesty" Puller, USMC). This battle proved to be the precursor to the largest cavalry battle ever fought in North America – The Battle of Brandy Station on 9 June 1863. During the battle at Kelly's Ford, the 5th Virginia Cavalry lost one officer and one trooper killed with two officers and seven troopers wounded, and 16 horses killed with 13 wounded.

CONFEDERATE GRAVESITES

(Contributed by Historian/Genealogist Compatriot Fred Boelt)

Cedar Grove Cemetery has a large section of unmarked graves of Confederate veterans. Many of the men interred here are recorded in Richard Manning Bucktrout's Daybook and Ledger. He laid them to rest in rows organized by the state that they were from. The section is marked by a large granite spire with crossed battle flags and the dates 1861-1865. There is also a granite threshold inscribed "1861 Our Confederate Dead 1865." At the front of this section, there are six small sandstone markers with almost illegible names and "CV" inscribed on them.

Recently, we have been exploring the possibility of getting regular veterans' markers for these graves to honor their service and better preserve the identity of their resting places. Two of the men are the Maupin brothers; Jesse Cole, whose grave has a small bronze marker in addition to the sandstone marker; and Samuel Travis, whom we believe is interred next to his brother. His grave is now marked only by a broken base of a sandstone marker. The story of the Maupin brothers was included in the August 2012 issue of Picket Lines. We have now located a descendant, and we are working with her to procure markers for the Maupins.

But that leaves four other men to honor. Finding the details of their lives and service is more challenging. One stone reads, "J. Potts, 2nd Howitzers." This man has now been identified as John Potts who first appeared in the 1860 census. He was living in the City of Williamsburg. He was 28 years old, a mechanic, and he was born in New York City. His wife, Hellen, was 21 years old, and she was born in Warwick County, Virginia. In this case, we learned more about this couple from her Confederate Widow's Pension application. They were married in Williamsburg in 1856. Other records indicate that she was the daughter of Robert and Nancy Barham of Warwick County, and that Hellen was born in August 1837.

John Potts enlisted on May 20, 1861, at Williamsburg. He was a private in Captain W. R. Garrett's Williamsburg Artillery. Potts was promoted on May 30, 1862, from corporal to sergeant. On October 6, 1862, he transferred as a private into the 2nd Company, Richmond Howitzers. While on furlough in New Kent County, he was captured on January 20, 1864, sent to Point Lookout, and exchanged at Aiken's Landing on March 17, 1865. He was again captured at Jackson Hospital in Richmond on April 3, 1865. Potts was paroled on April 17, 1865.

Sketchy information from the 1870 and 1880 censuses indicate that John and his wife were living in Williamsburg and his occupation was listed as "carpenter" on each census. There is no mention of children for this couple. In the 1900 census, Hellen Potts was still living in Williamsburg, but she was then a widow. Again, her widow's pension application, which she submitted in 1902, stated that John had died in 1892 from complications of "disease from the war."

Unfortunately, the James City and Williamsburg death registers for that year are missing, so we have no further information on John Potts' death. Also, an obituary for him has not been located. The pension application was signed by two members of the Magruder-Ewell Camp, Confederate Veterans. Perhaps John was a member of this camp and perhaps they were responsible for having him buried in the Confederate section of Cedar Grove Cemetery. Another intriguing thought; were they responsible for the small sandstone markers? Perhaps we are today continuing their work.
